Computer Science Major

I am a sophomore and also a new transfer student at Indiana University, and This is my first semester at IU. Before this, I have some basic JAVA experience at my previous school. iOS APP DEV is the class I take in this semester. I think developing apps is a really interesting and challenging thing. It gives me a chance to implement my idea become an APP that can be used on the phone.

I wrote the Yo!You app because I want to provide a chat app that would help people to maintain a good relationship with their friends.

Yo!You is an app that helps people keep a better relationship with their friends. The fully functional version will be different from any chat app on the market. The main different between YoYou and other app is that the user can record events that happened with a friend by text, photos, and videos. Which means User has an independent and private page for each of user's friend to record their events. Each page only records the events happened between the user and one of the user's friend. The events will be listed by a timeline. It likes a memoir that help the user to recall the stories between the user and user's friend. I think the more details you can remember about your friend, the better relationship you can build with your friend. So, this app is better than other chat apps on maintaining a good relationship with their friend. Otherwise, User can choose any event that was recorded by the user and post it to a public platform.
